IFE ONLY ON EARTH

EST OF UNIVERSE UNINHAB-ITED, SAY SCIENTISTS.

71th Modern Telescopes Millions of Stars Are Easily Discovered, But Conditions Seem to Preclude Pos sibility of Living Organisms There.

Astronomers can see with a great odern telescope at least 100,000 tars in the entire universe. The nestion arises: "How many other odles like the earth exist in space?" 'rof. T. J. J. See of the United States lavy claims that the study of the double stars tends to support the con-tention of Dr. Alfred Russel Wallace that the universe is not inhabited ex-cept the earth alone. In 1896 Dr. See published a work on the orbits of all the double stars which could be determined at that time, and he found the double stars so different from the solar system that he says no other system like that to which the earth belongs is known to exist in the heavens. The double stars revolve in orbits of high eccentricity, and the two members of a system are usually equal or comparable in mass, while the planets of the solar system move in very circular orbits and have masses which are infinitely small compared to that of the sun, about which they revolve. The result is that the solar system affords equable conditions of heat and light, such as organic life requires, while the system of the double stars would furnish such great changes of light and heat that life could not survive on a planet attached to a member of a double, such as Sirius or Procyon.

The sun has a mass 746 times greater than all the planets combined, and this makes it an autocrat over the planets, whose motions it dominates absolutely. The double stars are in reality systems of double suns, and mathematicians claim that a planet could not move safely and quietly in such a system-that it would sooner or later come into collision with one of the stars, or be driven from the system never to return, in either case destroying the chances of organic life. The number of dark bodies in the heavens is immense and, of course, it is possible that some of these may afford conditions suitable for organic fife, but up to this time astronomers are unable to point to a single body of this kind outside of the solar system.

Of dark planets attending the stars Dr. See writes: "If such inconsiderable companions as our sun possesses attend the fixed stars, they would neit er be visible nor could they be disc rered by any perturbations which they might produce. It is, therefore, impossible to determine whether the stellar system includes such bodies as the planets, and we are thus unaware of the existence of any other system like our own. On the other hand, the heavens present to our consideration an infinite nunber of double systems, each of which is divided into comparable masses. These double systems stand in direct contrast to the planetary system, where the central body has 746 times the mass of all the other bodies com-

Street Accidents.

Twelve per cent of all the accidents to people in cities happen on the streets. Statistics show that the average citizen, if he should meet with 100 serious mischances on his walks abroad, would slip on the ice, and fall down under other circumstances, sixty-eight times; he would get hurt ten times in boarding or dismounting from cars; he would be knocked down, or otherwise injured, by horses and wagons six times; he would be bitten by dogs four times, and he would step disastrously upon banana peels twice. The remaining mishaps would be miscellaneous, and might include one or two collisions with motor cars, which

"And now," she asked, raising an admiring and benevolent eyeglass to receive his bow, "tell me what you are." "Madame," he replied, "I am a Moldo-Wallachian." "What!" cried the vivacious hostess, with still more interest. "So young, and yet a Moldo-Wallachian!"

Dog Cures Cancer. A worthy woman, whose veracity is not questioned, told me yesterday that her nucle was cured of cancer by les-ting a faithful dog lick the malignant cutaneous seirrhus. The carcinoma was the result of a gunshot wound in the leg. Her belief is that the cure killed the dog, but as the brute was 10 years old it is likely that he had renched the limit of his days. He was a sport in former days, and his manly form and good looks made him a favorite with the women, although he did not marry until a few years ago. He has a rich sister in Philadelphia, but as she is away on her vacation he can not find her, and does not want to disgrace her by advertising for her. He says there is a fund in the fraternity of counterfeiters to which he is entitled, but cannot locate the treasurer. He is reduced to abject poverty, and with tears in his eyes yesterday said: "How can I meet my God with such a record as I have?" Then he brightened up and said: "But nobody can call me a thief or a murdereronly a counterfeiter-and for the past twelve years I have lived honestly."

During his life he spent fourteen Christmastides in prison. He learned the art of engraving in New York and in 1862 was arrested in South street, Philadelphia, for passing $5 notes of his own manufacture. He served a year in Cherry Hill. In 1865 he was arrested on suspicion, but went free, In 1874 he was caught making half dollars at South Vineland and went to Trenton for three years. History of Ann Story Little Known to the People of To-Day, But Records Prove Her Great Services to the Cause of American Liberty.

The Vermont Society of Colonial Dames dedicated at Salisbury recently a marble monument to mark the site of Ann Story's cabin, says a Rutland (Vt.) dispatch to the New York Her-

This woman led a life of patriotism and hard work seldom equaled, and there is now a chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in this city named for her.

The monument is a farge square block of marble presented by Fletcher D. Proctor, son of Senator Redfield Proctor. It bears this inscription: "On this spot stood the home of Ann Story. In grateful memory of her service in the struggle of the Green Mountain Boys for the independence of Vermont. Erected by the Vermont Society of Colonial Dames, May 30,

The history of Ann Story is little known outside the annals of the town, yet it shows many deeds of unusual bravery. She was a pioneer in the town of Salisbury, one of the first towns in Addison county chartered by King George III. Her husband, with their fourteen-year-old son, went there in 1774, leaving the rest of his family in Connecticut. He was building a log cabin when he was killed by a falling tree.

The next year Mrs. Story, with her three sons and two daughters, continued the home making in the wilderness begun by her husband. Nightly they were disturbed by the howling of wolves and panthers, and often were visited by hostile Indians, but being a woman of remarkable physical strength, she was able to swing an axe as well as a man, roll logs with a lever or fire a musket, so the little home prospered in spite of many setbacks. When the revolutionary war broke out most of the families in that part of the New Hampshire grants moved to southern countles, where they were in less danger from attacks by the Tories and hostile Indians, but Mrs. Story and her little family remained. and many a patriot found shelter under her hospitable roof.

In the summer of 1776 a party of Indians descended from Canada, pillaging the abandoned farm houses. Their presence in the clearing next to hers was discovered by Mrs. Story, and, putting her children and valuables into a cance, she paddled through Otter Creek, which on he her door, to a nearby swamp. Lying hidden she saw the snanges destroy her home. Undismayed, she built another small house, utilizing the put into the ground the instructor trunks of trees small enough to be handled without a team. This done, called on the class to tell what they had noted. All went well until she she and her sons dug a place of secret refuge in the bank of the creek. The entrance was sufficiently large

A party of Whigs was soon organized and upon the track of Jenny's associates. Their camp at Mendon, near Rutland. twenty-five miles away, was surrounded that night, and fourteen Tory prisoners were captured and taken to Fort Ticonderoga.

Mrs. Story was twice married after the close of the war, dying at the age of 76. She was buried at Middlebury.

Noble Heart the First Requisite. Above all other things a woman who would be charming must possess a true and noble heart, full of love and sympathy for her fellow beings, and an intelligent mind, capable of seeing matters from more than one standpoint. Any woman thus endowed by nature undeniably has within herself the possibilities for ideal womanhood for from these characteristics spring the many little virtues which make a woman loved, admired and needed by those around her. - Er
